A collection of 100's of die-cast scale model cars are going under the Charterhouse hammer in their auction of collector's items on Friday 13th December.

"It's a huge collection amassed by the owner, who lives near Weymouth, over a long period of time," commented Richard Bromell. "He has been having a sort out recently and decided now is the time to let other collectors enjoy the models and called me for a home visit. I must admit there were a lot more there than I thought there would be!"

Most of the scale models have never been out of their boxes. They were stored in the attic of the house which is why they have survived in such good condition.

Models in the collection include supercars with Porsche, Ferrari, Bentley, Lamborghini, Bugatti, other sports cars and race cars along with Fords, Mercedes and many, many other marques.

Overall, the collection is expected to sell for £2,000 at the Charterhouse auction, which is a fraction of the millions of pounds it would take to buy the real cars.

Charterhouse are now accepting further entries for their busy auction programme with model cars, trains, coins, medals, toys and other collectors' items in December followed by pictures, Beswick and automobilia in January with specialist classic & vintage motorcycle and car auctions in February.
